Mr. and Mrs. Morris had a drive in the country and saw an old woman there. She had some beautiful oranges. “She’s selling them very cheaply.” Mrs. Morris said.

Mr. Morris stopped the car, and his wife got out and bought ten of the oranges. Then they talked to the woman. She said, “Come and have tea with my husband and me in our house.”

They had some tea and cakes, and then Mr. Morris said to the woman, “You sell your oranges very cheaply. Why do you do that?”

The woman smiled and said, “We live in the country, and nobody lives near us. We like talking to people, but nobody stops here. Then we put those cheap oranges there, and now a lot of people stop. I bring them home, and we talk and we’re happy.”
